PRINCE-HUNTING WAS A WET JOB

Dear Girls Braved Dangers of the Deep to Seek Young Alexander.

AND HE WASN'T "IN."

With Finery Ruined by Wales, They Climbed Aboard Ship, All for Naught.

Mean Waves Splash Finery.

The boats pressed into service for the attle-ship trip are fair-weather craft. hey aren't used to carrying lovely minute and the poor gives saw their finery getting splashed, then we, then drenched, they got frightened and angry.

"Weather's a little rough," grinned the boatmen.

"It's no mean to bring us out with the boatmen, they cried, wringing out telling us," they cried, wringing out telling us."

Deforte defeated.

the boatmen.

'It's 100 mean to bring us out without telling us.' they cried, wringing wet, cold hands. 'Our clothes are spoiled, and we'll surely drown or die of pneumonia.'

No one was drowned. Many may have been stricken with pneumonia. There was just cause.

been stricken with pneumonia. There was just cause.

When these poor bedraggled girls were put alongside the Berwick they climbed up her side and demanded, between shivers, to see "the P-n-p-prince." Alas! he wouldn't receive them. Not one of those cold, wet ladles saw him whom they had come through wind and water to seek,

Hunted His Highness.

In vain they poked around the case-mates and all the queer corners, hoping to find His Highness in hiding. They browsed about the closed hatches and fretted nervously, but the Prince never came out.

There was nothing to do but so ashere. They all came to it, one after another, the poor girls—when they found their several craft. Some of them didn't find the craft.

the craft.

They were so disappointed and the time between walts so long, they tumbled into the first launch that came along and grumbled about having to pay extra fares when they hadn't seen their lion.

In Greater New York the Grand Central

Lots of dear girls got a ducking yesterday. That's because they learned of Prince Alexander, the nephew of Prince Louis of Battenberg, young, handsome and eligible, to say the least.

Who says American girls can withstand even the mention of a fine English title? You wouldn't think so if you had seen them, young and fair, started on their various expeditions into the domain of Prince Charming.

Queen Victoria, has headquarters aboard the Berwick—"Barick," in true Britain.

No sooner had news of this got abroad than the girls donned their best growns, flufflest boas and chic-est chapeaux for a terrific onslaught of feminine beauty. Hundreds of young women, gowned "regardless," rushed to the Seventy-ninth street pier to ship for the Berwick and Prince Alexander.

Lying off in midstream, the trim British vessel looked a pleasant sight, and the whitecaps dancing on the blue river were mighty pretty to look at. So these bought their 50-cent round-trip tickets and climbed aboard the launches.
